SULLIVAN HIT BY HIS INVESTIGATOR

James M. Sullivan.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Influenced by men who sought the appointment of a friendly minister to Santo Domingo and who considered him the most available candidate, Mr. Sullivan, in May, 1913, wrote out and forwarded a formal application for appointment.

In these words Senator James D. Phelan, special commissioner who investigated the Santo Domingo diplomatic scandal, in his report, just made public, confirms the accuracy of claims made by those who sought Sullivan's dismissal that he was "backed" as minister to Santo Domingo by the group of American financiers known as the "Banco National crowd."

"There was no doubt," says Senator Phelan's report, "that the conspicuous and acknowledged supporters of Mr. Sullivan for this place were John G. Gray, of Wilmington, Del. * * * Congressman James Hamilton, of New York; Frederick Ryan, classmate and lawyer in New York, and James K. McGuire, former mayor of Syracuse. * * * There is likewise no doubt that his most anxious and zealous advocate was William C. Beer, of New York." (Mr. Beer and Mr. Gray were attorneys for the Banco National.)

Doubts Sullivan's Veracity.
"In view of the large financial interests in Santo Domingo possessed by his clients, the self-effacement with which Mr. Beer championed Mr. Sullivan's case is deserving of comment. * * *

"Mr. Sullivan testified, 'I met Mr. Beer casually in the New Willard hotel about the time of my appointment,' but other testimony, Mr. Sullivan's own and others, indicates that these meetings were far from casual."

"In other places the report indicates the commissioner's disbelief in the frankness and truthfulness of Minister Sullivan's defense. Reviewing Beer's activities in Sullivan's behalf, the report adds:

"And yet Mr. Sullivan denies, in his formal answer, that Mr. Beer furthered his candidacy, and in doing so represented the Banco Nacional and the Jarvis interests."

The report asserts that Beer and his clients also sought the appointment of other officials in Santo Domingo, and that Beer, when invited to testify, "avoided taking the stand, although ample opportunity was given to him." The report continues:

"Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Beer succeeded in keeping from the secretary of state the knowledge of these special interests."

FRANCE FOUND FIT TO CONTINUE WAR

To the End and is Confident of the Outcome Declares a Military Authority.

PARIS, July 31.—A year of war ends "France is fit to continue the struggle to the end and confident of the outcome," says Count Adrien Lannes de Montebello in a review of the first twelve months of hostilities given to the Associated Press. Count de Montebello, a recognized authority on military affairs, was one of the strongest advocates of the three-year military service law, and its co-author with the former premier, Louis Barthou. He was formerly deputy from Rheims and vice president of the committee on military affairs of the chamber of deputies. His grandfather was Marshal Lannes, at whose death on the battlefield of Essling Napoleon is said to have wept.

His review of the war follows: "France was not expecting war and her preparedness, therefore was less complete than those of her adversaries, who, knowing their intentions had accumulated an immense supply of fighting material and disposed of their troops in such a manner as to strike the most powerful blow of which they were capable."

Initial Activity.
"Germany threw against Belgium and France fifty-two corps, or almost her entire military force as mobilized in August. Under the impact of the German advance, the French armies, with their British allies, suffered initial reverses and great losses, especially in the battle of Charleroi. While the French armies were in retreat a national ministry was formed and the civil population of France organized for war. The French and British armies stood on the line of the Marne from a point near Paris to the eastern frontier of France. They received the shock of more than 1,200,000 German troops, and defeated them with somewhat inferior forces. The Germans were outled and outfought in a vast general action over a line of more than 120 miles."

"The French troops were too exhausted by the fifteen days of marching and fighting to make their victory decisive. The Germans checked their retreat upon the line of the Aisne and had sufficient time to dig in. The battle of the Aisne developed by the Germans endeavoring to turn our left and by the simultaneous French effort to turn the German right."

Race for the Sea.
"This contest resulted in a race for this sea in the obstinate two months' battle along the Yser in October and November. The Germans again failed and finally gave up that part of their offensive on account of their terrific losses."

"Simultaneous with the battle of the Marne, though forming no part of the battle front of what has been called the battle of the Marne, were the operations in the Artois, the Woevre and the Grand Couronne de Nancy. The army of the German Crown Prince, marching on Verdun, and the army of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, marching on Nancy, both defeated in some of the bloodiest engagements of the entire war."

"The ultimate result of these defeats was the liberation of that part of the ancient province of Lorraine left to France after 1870 from the occupation of the German army. The German forces had penetrated fifteen or eighteen miles. They were not only driven out before the first of November, but since then the French have invaded Upper Alsace, of which they now hold a considerable part. This country, taken from France in the war of 1870-71, has been reorganized and is under control of a civil government, which restored the school and judicial system of France."

"From the battle of Charleroi to the end of the first year of the war the Germans achieved no successes on the western battle front save the slight advance at Solisssol during the floods of the river Aisne, the advance at Ypres, partially lost afterwards, at the time of the first attack, with the assistance of asphyxiating gas."

Successes of Allies.
"The successes of the allies since the battle of the Marne are in recapture of Thann, St. Etienne, Hartmannswillerkopf, Metz, La Fontenelle, together with considerable territory, in the Alsatian Vosges; the capture of an entire German position in the forest of Le Pretre, along the wedge the Germans are still holding in the French lines at St. Mihiel; an advance of a mile along a front of ten miles at Beaulieu, in the Champagne."

In extension of Mr. Bryan's action in appointing Sullivan, Commissioner Phelan mentions the staggering indebtedness secured for the individual, even from members of Yale university faculty, but adds that the secretary of the university entered formal protest against the unfitted Sullivan, and that this protest reached Washington before he was confirmed."

Points of the Report.
Among the other outstanding points of the report are the following:

That Sullivan's claim for credit for inaugurating payment of interest in government deposits was due to others.

Receiver Vick inaugurated the reform.

That Sullivan's claim for credit for his bills and other debts, that efforts were made to buy up judgments against him at a discount, and that Sullivan's proof that his political backers were not the ones to advance him money for this purpose is not conclusive.

That Sullivan was the only one among twenty-seven foreign ministers and consuls in Santo Domingo unable to speak the language of the country.

That there was no proof produced to show that Sullivan was addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors or that his attitude on official occasions was such as to give offense.

That the affidavit sent by Sullivan's defenders to the president attacking the personal character of Receiver Vick was repudiated by one of the affidants and rejected altogether by the commissioner.

country; the capture of Neuve Chapelle by the British, the capture of Notre Dame de Lorette, Carency and Neuville St. Vaast, and an advance of two to three miles along a front about seven miles north from Arras by the French, and the clearing of the left bank of the Yser of the enemy by the Belgian army.

"Never since the war began has the French army been so fit to continue it to a triumphant conclusion as today. We have not only carried on the war with success during the year but we have accumulated immense reserve of every necessity for continuing the war until it has been won. Our reserve troops in depots and under training are relatively greater than those of the Germans. The army is absolutely confident. The people, behind the army to a man, are equally so."

"The French people, through no fault of theirs, have suffered and are suffering today, but they are equal to every hardship, every effort necessary to drive the war to a final victorious conclusion."

INVESTIGATES SELF TO DETERMINE IF HE WAS NEGLIGENT

George Uhler.

George Uhler, supervising inspector general of the steamboat inspection service of the U. S. department of commerce, is in Chicago helping to conduct an investigation to determine whether or not he and others were negligent in connection with the Eastland disaster. General Uhler has been head of the steamboat inspection service since 1903, leaving the presidency of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Society to take the place, and since his occupancy of the position has been through several hard fights with various interests. In his earlier years he was a marine engineer himself, serving, however, on the salt water and not on the lakes.

Mrs. J. J. Lowther and daughter Niha, were recent Clarksburg shoppers.

Al Meredith and wife, of Wheeling, are here guests of H. M. Meredith, his brother.

Traveling Man's Experience.

"In the summer of 1888 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians worked over me from four a. m. to six p. m. without giving me any relief and then told me they did not expect me to live; that I had best telegraph for my family. Instead of doing so, I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to buy me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a double dose according to the directions and went to sleep after the second dose. At five o'clock the next morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping point, a well man but feeling rather shaky from the severity of the attack," writes H. W. Ireland, Louisville, Ky. Obtainable everywhere. Advertisement.
